Gunman shoots two, kills self in Gowanus

Quiet morning. A 54-year-old man who reportedly was applying for a job at a factory in Gowanus, Brooklyn, opened fire on Monday, seriously wounding two people who were there. Short standoff. Police said that the gunman barricaded himself inside of the building before then deciding to take his own life. City dumps on alternate side parking relief

The city's Sanitation Department trashed a proposal by the City Council on Monday to loosen alternate side parking rules that result in more than 1 million tickets to car owners citywide.

Currently, stretches of streets are closed for at least 90 minutes on designated days for sweepers to pass by, sometimes twice. Often, drivers wait out the trucks before moving their cars back to the curbside.

Last year, the city issued almost 1.3 million parking violation summonses.

Representatives from the Sanitation Department said the proposal would lead to confusion if residents aren't aware of how many passes a sweeper intends to make.

"Our prime objective is to get the street cleaned, period," assistant chief of cleaning Paul Visconti said.

Alec Slatky of AAA New York said the city should heed drivers' concerns.

"It's not easy, and nothing is so simple or straightforward," Slatky said, "but it's clearly just about bureaucratic inertia."

For sale. A couple of furniture dealers have turned their Bed-Stuy home into a showcase.

Forget "working from home" — for Rayon Roskar and Ellie Kim, their work actually is their home, as well as their daily passion. The duo, with credentials in restoration and art history, reside in their Bed-Stuy apartment which doubles as a storeroom for their furniture restoration business, a setup they have dubbed a "living gallery."

Every item in the living space is a restored piece of furniture that is for sale, minus the bed and a handful of clothing in the apartment's bedroom partition. The duo met at a design fair in Switzerland and their space specializes in European design pieces from the 1930s to 1980s.

"We keep our store-room and our home as you see it at all times, just because Ellie and I are both very tidy and minimal ...

we own what we need," Roskar said.

"The way we work matches with our personalities, it's how we grew up, so it's innate to us ... I never really thought about it, it was so natural," Kim added.

To make sure that everything is nice and tidy, customers must make an appointment to drop by to see the furniture.

According to Roskar, living with a piece imbues it with "the characteristic of the people, of the room, of whoever's handling it."

They have only one strict rule for items they acquire: They must love it.

"If you can't sell it, you'd better love it, because you have to live with it," Roskar said.

Sign of design

The motive for merging a workspace with a living space is economical, as it cuts down on expensive gallery overhead and transportation costs, Roskar said.

- It is a practice common among furniture dealers in Geneva, where their business was born.
- When a client visits they can see not only what an item looks like, but also how it can be displayed and cared for, the couple said.

Barricade. Gunman shoots two, kills himself in Gowanus factory

A man inquiring about a job at a Gowanus factory on Monday shot two workers and barricaded himself in the building before killing himself, cops said.

The two victims were hospitalized with critical wounds, a Fire Department Spokesperson said.

Subway wireless coverage ranked by train route

Connect. A study conducted through 12 routes found that the city's subways are still dead zones.

New York City's subways are still wireless dead zones, a new study found.

As the Metropolitan Transportation Authority moves to improve reception on subway platforms, cell phone and Wi-Fi coverage is still lacking underground, according to a study by benchmarking firm Global Wireless Solutions, Inc.

Engineers with the firm performed mobile benchmarking tests while riding 12 subway routes in Manhattan over three days in early May and found that network coverage was generally low.

Global Wireless Solutions CEO Paul Carter said the poor results weren't surprising, but that straphangers are eager for better cell service underground.

"We expect it everywhere now," he said.

MTA spokesman Adam Lisberg said the survey is misleading — in no small part because the century-old subway tunnels have never been wired for subway service.

"This alleged study by an out-of-state company is flawed from the get-go," Lisberg said. "They tried to measure cell Transit Wireless has outfitted 47 stations for Wi-Fi and cell service and hopes to have all 277 underground stations connected by 2017.

- Installing antennas inside the stations is difficult, but it would be harder to put them in subway tunnels used round-the-clock.

Carter acknowledged that cell reception is spotty or nonexistent on subway trains because most underground platforms aren't wired for coverage.

"The point is to understand where it is today," Carter said.

Father charged with murder of 8-year-old son

Investigators charged a father in the death of his son after the young boy was found dead in their Queens home Sunday.

According to police, officers arrived at the Fresh

Meadows home at 10:10 p.m. after receiving a call about what they said was an emotionally disturbed person.

Inside, they found an 8-year-old boy unconscious and unresponsive in his bed. The boy's 41-year-old father, identified as Boujeke Kenmoe, was found nearby, bleeding from reportedly self-inflicted injuries to his wrists.

Emergency workers declared the boy dead at the scene. Police said the mother was not at home when the boy was killed.

By late Monday morning, police said Kenmoe was arrested and charged with second-degree murder. CHESTER JESUS SORIA

Club Getaway: Summer Camp for Grownups.

My best friends and I have almost nothing in common. I'm a total Type A adrenaline junkie. Katie is laid back and loves to be pampered. And Claire just wants to party all the time. But somehow all of our differences are what make us so great together. Except when it comes to taking a vacation.

Every year we've tried to find the perfect trip for all three of us, where I can be active and adventurous, Katie can work on her tan and Claire can dance till dawn. But somebody always ended up bored.

Just as we were about to give up, I found the vacation we were looking for in Club Getaway, a "Summer Camp for Grown-Ups". We called and made a reservation for the following weekend.

Katie, Claire and I met up in Manhattan the following Friday to hop on the 90-minute chartered bus ride to Club Getaway, in the Berkshire Mountains.

At Club Getaway I took lessons in rock climbing and the flying trapeze, went mountain biking and even learned to water ski. I won't lie and say I was the most graceful water skier you've ever seen, but I did manage to stay up after three tries – and having a cute Australian instructor didn't hurt either.

Club Getaway, a weekend sports and adventure resort, is located in the Berkshire Mountains of Kent, CT, just 90 minutes from NYC by car or Getaway Bus.

Katie spent most of her time just lounging by the lake with her iPad. Although she did take her first-ever yoga class, along with cooking and wine-tasting classes. She says she was so inspired she might actually use her kitchen. We'll see.

Claire loved that Club Getaway's "Boathouse" had none of what she hates about clubs in New York – a cover, overpriced drinks, or a snobby atmosphere.

She was up dancing pretty late on Friday, but managed to wake up in time to hit the massive brunch buffet the next morning. Of course, she bragged that she worked off the three pancakes and omelet by staying active all day. And she actually met the guy she's now dating during the Saturday afternoon softball game.

Even though we often split up to do activities on our own, it was easy for us to meet up throughout the weekend to work in plenty of bonding time. We joined a hike together, met up for meals, danced at the Boathouse each night, and sat around the campfire regaling over the days' events.

I have to say it was perfect. We finally found what we were each looking for in a vacation. We're already checking out clubgetaway.com to plan our next adventure.

Tests. Pistorius had no mental disorder at time of shooting

Oscar Pistorius, the South African sprinter on trial for murder for shooting his girlfriend, was not suffering from a mental condition at the time she was killed, a psychiatric report said on Monday.

Pistorius has admitted to shooting dead his model girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp, but maintains he mistook her for an intruder hiding in his toilet.

The trial, which began in March, took a month-long break to allow the 27-year-old to undergo tests at Pretoria's Weskoppies hospital after a forensic psychologist brought by the defense testified he

OMG! Meet the five-time reigning wife-carrying champ of the world

Taisto Miettinen, an insurance lawyer from Helsinki, Finland, never thought of himself as a sportsman. But this 49-year-old now has the prestige of being a champ at the Wife-carrying World Championships. Held July 4 in Sonkajarvi, Finland, the event sees men carrying their female partners while running through an obstacle course. Miettinen was first introduced to the sport in the late '90s. "I had no wife, that's why I started to search the Internet for a woman that would fit me. She does need to be my wife to be accepted by the rules," Miettinen told Metro.

What got you into wife-carrying?

had strong legs, and so I wanted to prove it. I made a profile on a dating website and started my research for the lightly built woman ranging from 46 to 49 kilograms [102 to 110 pounds] in weight. I sent many messages explaining the competition, and many girls answered. I chose Kristiina [Haapanen] to be my partner because she was the first who contacted me and she is exactly 49 kilograms — that's the minimum a woman needs to be for the race.

How did you practice?
Just three times through the course before a competition. We also meet in the pub for that!

With 1 billion posts, likes and comments in just the first half of the World Cup, the soccer tournament is already the most talked-about event in Facebook's decade-long history, data obtained by Reuters showed.

"People are having conversations on Facebook about what they watch in a really unprecedented scale," Nick Grudin, the company's director of partnerships, told Reuters.

Dozens stuck for hours on ride after power failure

A SeaWorld San Diego elevator ride with dozens aboard was stuck some 220 feet above ground for four hours on Sunday after a power failure, officials said.

A 17-year-old boy suffering from anxiety and hyperventilation was taken to a hospital after park workers lowered the Sky-Tower ride and evacuated the passengers.

"We were there stand-

Most common stock market mistakes

I teach more than 5,000 students how to profit consistently in the stock market, but time and again I see people making the same mistakes. If you want to thrive and be wealthy, don't be guilty of these sins:

Mistake No. 1: getting married to your stocks

Human beings want to be loved for long periods of time, and that's why so many of us get married. Over the past 100 years, the U.S. stock market has risen dramatically, so those who invested long-term and "got married" to their stocks have been rewarded handsomely. But times change. Nowadays, many marriages end in divorce, many should end sooner than later and the U.S. stock market does not reward long-term investors as it once did. Don't get married to your stocks; think of them more as teenage love affairs — passionate and fun, but not lifelong relationships.

Mistake No. 2: not accepting losses

We're all wrong at various points in our lives, but we're usually able to cut our losses and move on instead of wallowing in self-pity and inaction, especially in the stock market. Sadly, far too many people refuse to accept their financial losses and do everything they can to avoid dealing with their mistakes. They double up on their position, or even triple it as the price goes against them, rationalizing that by dip-buying, they will eventually enjoy greater rewards when proved right.

But because most traders and investors lose in this game, adding to a losing position usually only adds to their pain in the end. Don't put yourself in this situation; losses can be a very slippery slope, and most big losses begin as small losses that can be cut quickly by admitting the mistake and moving on.

Mistake No. 3: trusting tips

Speculating on stocks is practically a national pastime. Unfortunately, academic studies show that the majority of people who invest and trade based on their gut feelings lose more often than they win, and the odds of success are worse than going to the casino.

Don't gamble in the stock market. If you want to invest, buy quality blue-chip companies, and remember not to get married to them, and ignore speculative, long-shot tips.

Up: Ronaldo prevented the U.S. men's soccer team from beating Portugal, but in his next game he scored the winning goal to beat Ghana and push the U.S. into the next round.

Down: U.S. women's goalkeeper Hope Solo got into trouble with the law AGAIN, and Uruguay soccer star Luis Suarez bit an opponent AGAIN. Lock these people up — they don't learn!

SnapChat has expanded from simply photo-based messages to include "stories" which are experience montages shared by users during live events like EDC.

Keke Palmer

Remember Keke Palmer's innocent days, when she was an actress on "True Jackson VP"? The top part of this dress is actually kinda cool and goddesslike. But the cut-outs at her upper thighs are just weird. What happens when she sits down? What does one wear under a dress with upper-thigh cut-outs? Actually, we don't want to know.

Erica Hubbard

Erica Hubbard is beautiful, but her BET Awards outfit looks like something you'd buy on the discount rack at Fred-erick's of Hollywood. If your underwear is showing, it means what you're wearing is for the bedroom only — even if it's floor length.

Kyla Pratt

Kyla Pratt looks like a mermaid caught in a net. She's also about a half-inch away from exposing her nether regions. The actress might be on "Let's Stay Together," but this look screams "Let's get it together."

Faith Evans

Faith Evans is a very talented singer. Unfortunately her talent does not extend to awards-show dressing. She looks like a businesswoman trying to get a raise in all the wrong ways. Her ivory dress looks ill-fitting, and the exposed black bra is just sloppy.

Gabrielle Union

The worst part about Gabrielle Union's ensemble is that she would have nailed the look if it weren't for those ridiculous thigh-high black boots. If only she had paired her dress with strappy heels, she would be on everyone's best-dressed list today.

Nadia Buari

Nadia Buari looks like a cross between Maid Marian and Wonder Woman. The dress itself is beautiful, but the sleeves take it into too-much-fabric territory and her bedazzled cobalt heels make it look cheap.

Talking points

Bynes' bong-tossing case tossed out of court

Remember when Amanda Bynes was publicly unraveling, wearing weird wigs, getting in ugly Twitter wars and throwing bongs out of windows? OK, so it was actually only one bong. She threw it from the 36th floor of her Manhattan residence last May, which led to reckless endangerment charges (because a bong falling 36 stories can be deadly, not to mention make for an embarrassing obituary) and marijuana possession. But yesterday, according to the Associated Press, a Manhattan judge dismissed the charges after Bynes' attorney submitted an affidavit that said that the actress had complied with the court's requirements of staying out of trouble and attending counseling twice a week. So is this the last we'll see of Amanda Bynes in this gossip column? In February she had her day in court for her 2012 alcohol-related reckless driving charge. Now there are no charges from those erratic days left to reckon with. It's been real, Amanda! Thanks for being you.

This week in Shia LaBeouf news

Shia LaBeouf got something out of his arrest for making a scene during a Broadway performance of "Cabaret." A rep for Liza Minnelli — who starred in the film version — tells E! News he sent LaBeouf a DVD copy of the film: "I figured he may want to find out how it ends," he says.

Comedy writing isn't always funny

Pop culture.

Eavesdrop on author Mike Sack's conversations with comedy's top writers in "Poking A Dead Frog."

Crafting comedy isn't funny business. Between writing "And Here's The Kicker: Conversations with 21 Humor Writers About Their Craft" and his new book "Poking A Dead Frog: Conversations With Today's Top Comedy Writers," Mike Sacks has learned that humor writers are pretty peculiar.

"I'm not sure if [humor writers] are more obsessive than people in other professions, but they can be obsessive about writing and getting better," Sacks says. "If you want to be a success, you have to be obsessive. It's not like Mel Brooks stopped working. There's an obsessiveness within him of wanting to succeed after others may view him as having achieved all there is to achieve."

In addition to Mel Brooks, Sacks also interviewed Bill Hader, Will Tracy (who writes headlines for The Onion), Amy Poehler, Paul Feig ("Freaks and Geeks," "Arrested Development," "Bridesmaids"), James Downey ("Saturday Night Live") and many more for the book.

On top of being obsessive, Sacks has found humor writers to be extremely sensitive, which is interesting considering that they make themselves completely vulnerable in their chosen career field. "If someone doesn't laugh at what you do, it's like pointing out that you're ugly. It's very, very hurtful," Sacks says.

Of all the humor writers and comedians Sacks has interviewed over the years, the person who surprised him most was 97-year-old Peg Lynch, who wrote for a popular radio show called "Ethel and Albert" in the 1940s and 1950s. "I called her out of the blue, and we spent two hours talking. After doing more research, I found out that she actually invented the sitcom form."

But whether it's writing for a radio show in the 1940s or penning the opening dialogues for today's late-night talk shows, Sacks says that some things about humor writing have stayed the same: "The basics are still there. You have to surprise the audience by connecting with the character. And the character hasn't changed. It's humans acting as humans and us laughing at their foibles."

FILM 14

'All That Heaven Allows'

$39.95
The Criterion Collection

It's said that everything you need to see you can stream online. This isn't even remotely true. New to Blu-ray/DVD is Criterion's "All That Heaven Allows," one of Douglas Sirk's retroactively acclaimed weepies. Here are three reasons to get your mitts on it:

1 It's said that filmmaker Douglas Sirk — cherished for his "women's pictures" from the 1950s — slipped subversion and satire past audiences. But it's hard to see how anyone could miss the harsh lesson of 1955's "All That Heaven Allows," about the May-December romance between a well-off widow (Jane Wyman) and a much younger, studly gardener (Rock Hudson). It's all right there on screen: The snooty country club regulars and Wyman's awful children do their best to kill the couple's love. Sirk was openly attacking '50s America, possibly subtly referencing Hudson's real-life alternative lifestyle. (No, not that one: his bohemian utopia far from the rigid populace that made Sirk's movies monster hits.)

But you can stream this

'Transformers: The Premake'

YouTube

Two hours and twenty whole minutes shorter than the new "Transformers" and a great deal more entertaining, Kevin B. Lee's quicksilver "Transformers: The Premake" is a kind of found-footage deconstruction of the latest Michael Bay behemoth. In it, Lee pieces together YouTube clips by civilians capturing the making of the film. Among its subjects are the way fandom has been used by the studios as free marketing, Hollywood's increasing union with China and whether tax breaks in cities such as Detroit are actually benefiting flailing local economies. It doesn't actually come to conclusions; there is no narration and minimal captioning. Viewers can watch the footage and come to any epiphanies on their own.

YOU CAN'T WATCH THAT ON NETFLIX

'Journey to the West: Conquering the Demons'

Netflix Instant

It's been awhile since Stephen Chow ("Kung Fu Hustle") dazzled with an outsized martial arts comedy fitted with ridiculous, Looney Tunes-style special effects. His latest doesn't feature him performing, but his presence is felt everywhere else. It's a spotty but frequently delightful blast.

2 Sirk was a master stylist who with 'Heaven' truly outdid himself: The colors change like a mood ring attached to Wyman's finger. But the best effect of all is Wyman herself, who outdoes even Julianne Moore in the film's quasi-remake "Far From Heaven." She holds everything in. Part of her anguish could be autobiographical: Newly divorced from Ronald Reagan, Wyman likely knew that at the Hollywood-ancient age of 38 she would soon be put out to the pasture of television. Indeed, that adds another level to the horrific scene in which her children bequeath her a new television set — a symbol of her loneliness and of Wyman's dreaded future.

3 Included on Criterion's predictably bounteous new edition is Mark Rappaport's 1992 documentary 'Rock Hudson's Home Movies,' which heads into the fray of the actor's secret life, exhaustingly combing over his clips for gay subtexts that may or may not have been put there as personal in-jokes by Hudson himself. But it goes beyond being merely funny (note the many older male "mentors" in his films) to a deeply moving, tragic portrait of someone forced to hide his real self from his adoring fans.

The indies are going online

On demand. A new indie, "Mutual Friends," will only be released on VOD. That was the plan.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Time was — and for the most part, still is — that movies weren't taken seriously unless they had a theatrical release. The new microbudgeted dramedy "Mutual Friends" — which follows various New Yorkers who eventually congregate at a party — won't be released theatrically, but the people behind the film didn't want it to be. Today it becomes available across every on-demand platform.

"That was essentially our plan from the start," says Matthew Watts, the director and one of several co-writers of the film. "Fewer people are going to theaters now. Theatrical is essentially [for] blockbusters. Releasing an independent film theatrically doesn't even make sense unless you have a couple million dollars to support it — even on the indie level."

"Mutual Friends" is far from the first film to embrace a purely digital, at-home life; Edward Burns has been doing it for years. But its reach is unusually wide, thanks to the outside-the-box thinking of its distributor, FilmBuff, a company that tries to find the most cost-effective ways to get as many people as possible to see its movies.

"You can be anywhere now," Watts says. "You can be in the back seat of a caravan in Illinois watching 'Mutual Friends.'"

Watts conceived the film as an experiment: He'd reach out to other writer friends, they'd write

"Mutual Friends" eventually piles its ensemble cast into a tight apartment for a party. / FILMBUFF

A VOD history

- An early form of VOD occurred in England in 1994. The Cambridge Digital Interactive Television Trial beamed content to 250 homes and some schools. But content proved hard to find, and the project closed two years later.
- The first fully commercial VOD service began in 1998, also in England, with Kingston Communications. At its height, it had 15,000 subscribers.
- In 2007 filmmaker-actor Edward Burns' "Purple Violets" became the first film to premiere on iTunes.
- By 2010, with the rise of Netflix Instant, 80 percent of Americans had watched video online.

their own short films then he'd combine them. Originally, the individual story lines varied in tone, from farcical to heavy drama. "We realized the [better] way to do it would be to find a theme, cut down the characters, combine others and really make it more of a 90-minute comedy."

Watts is happy to be working during a rare good time for independent movies, which now have more of a chance of being seen. But he admits that a theatrical release still carries strong cachet for filmmakers. "It's sad, honestly," he says. "It's great seeing a film shown in a dark, quiet theater with a rapt audience. That's still the goal and the dream."

Watts says the future isn't secure or foreseeable for how audiences will watch movies: "I don't know what's going to happen in the next two or three years."

What he knew about Yves Saint Laurent: "I have no history with the guy. I knew the silhouette, the glasses, the empire and the idea of perfection in his work — but nothing more."

How he feels about fashion: "I don't have a specific passion for fashion. Jilil [Lepert, director] didn't, either. He told me he wanted to do a movie about destiny and legend."

It was about a man chasing his dreams and a couple living together. How do you live with a genius? It wasn't about fashion. If it had been, I wouldn't have done the movie."

On playing a character who starts off shy and becomes extroverted as he gets into drugs: "There's a shyness to him. But at the same time, when he's with his closest friends and [his partner] Pierre Berge, he was doing impressions."

When Berge visited the set: "He came just once. He was in tears during the scene he watched, because we had the real dress. I can't imagine what was happening in his head."

On filming in Saint Laurent's Marrakesh home: "Pierre still lives there. And he still has Yves Saint Laurent's desk. Same thing in Paris. His last dog who's still alive is there. He came in and laid down on my feet. And the guy who takes care of the dog said he hadn't done that since Yves' death. There was a physical memory of the people."

On American acting: "I love this language. It's really playful for an actor — the musicality of it. And it's cinema I grew up with."

The details

Pierre Niney

- Where you've seen him: At 25, the French actor Niney has only had a few film roles, including in the romantic comedy "It Boy."
- Where he is now: His big break is playing the title character in "Yves Saint Laurent," about the late fashion icon.
- Where he's going: It was announced he'll be in "The Odyssey," based on a book by Jean-Michel Cousteau.

Becoming Yves

On preparing for the role

"I worked with numerous different coaches. One was for the drawing part, because Jilil wanted me to draw for real in the movie. I worked with a girl who worked for him for 15 years near the end of his life. Then I worked with a physical trainer to make a proper evolution of the body. And with a stylist. I had to learn about how a fashion house runs, how to make a dress, the codes and vocabulary, so I could feel comfortable and confident on the set. I also listened to at least two or three hours of him speaking every day."

Getting there A long but enjoyable journey

Though Dubai feels far away, at about 13 hours by plane, direct flights from New York City or Boston on Emirates airline make the journey comfortable — and the destination even more rewarding when you finally descend.

Demystify Dubai

UAE. The young metropolis has big aspirations.

When planning a trip to Dubai, set aside your expectations. The city's identity is dissonant — and it's still a work in progress. Originally a humble pearl-diving village, Dubai rose on the back of an oil boom in the mid-'60s and was quickly repackaged as a tourist destination. For many people, the resulting food, shopping and entertainment oasis is quite attractive; for others, the absence of history and culture from the United Arab Emirates' prodigal child is more heavily weighed.

But, yes: You will have access to the best of everything. World-renowned chefs helm all types of restaurants, from steak houses to sushi bars. Dubai is home to the world's tallest building, the Burj Khalifa, and the world's tallest hotel, the five-star JW Marriott Marquis. If the places you're visiting don't come with superlatives, your tour guide will be happy to fill in the blanks for you — liberally. Everything is the first, the best, nonpareil.

Enjoy traditional bedouin fare at Al Tawasol as part of a Frying Pan Adventures food tour. / AIRSPECTIV MEDIA

If you do happen to stay at the JW Marriott Marquis, you barely need to leave the property to get a taste of the high-end climate, with 14 restaurants, bars and nightclubs right on the premises, as well as a gym and rooftop pool (of course). You should also carve out time for the Saray Spa, which offers specialty services tailored to your surroundings, such as Hammam packages and Dead Sea baths. Plus, you can drink alcohol at the hotel — which isn't served outside of Westernized establishments, out of respect for Islamic values. The location puts you a (shockingly) cheap cab ride from just about everything to do in the city, such as visiting the Historic District or walking Jumeirah Beach.

Sheikh Zayed Road bisects the city. / JW MARRIOTT MARQUIS

However, if you don't mind being a little farther from key attractions, such as the Spice Market and the Gold Souk (both of which should have you on alert for scammers selling marked-up goods from India and China), you should try the all-inclusive Atlantis The Palm Dubai. It boasts its own aquarium, water park, spa, beachfront, 23 dining venues and unmatched views of the iconic man-made Palm Islands. If, for some reason, you still want to venture to the mainland, you won't be too far from the Burj Al Arab ("the world's most luxurious hotel") or the old-world-style boutique marketplace, Souk Madinat Jumeirah, which hosts concerts, parties and other special events in its al fresco amphitheater.

Dubai is currently prepping to host World Expo 2020, which coincides with the city's 50th anniversary of independence (declared in 1971). The occasion is expected to draw 25 million visitors. The city has less than six years to finish endless construction projects, with contracts and timelines enjoying noticeable flexibility.

It's just beginning to carve out industries that might give the desert metropolis a firmer sense of identity: The Al Nassma camel milk facility is unique in the world; try its products at The Majlis Café in the Dubai Mall. There's also the Bateel date factory, which ships its gourmet fruit, nut and chocolate products worldwide. Dubai is also home to an annual shopping festival, fashion week, food festival, international film festival and even Comic Con (for dates, visit www.dubaicalendar.ae).

The youthful optimism and high energy make the city worth visiting now; in a decade, Dubai will likely be unrecognizable — for better or worse.

Escape the crowds

An authentic glimpse of Emirati culture

To find the "real" Dubai, you might have to do a little work. You could venture out to the fish market, which is filled with Emirati men purchasing their meat and produce for the day. You could dine at Al-Fanar (www.alfanarrestaurant.com) for commercially produced traditional fare, or try street food (perhaps via a walking tour, such as Frying Pan Adventures, www.fryingpanadventures.com).

Global Village is a worldly carnival with local flair. / GETTY IMAGES

Though many theme parks are set to open soon in what's known as Dubailand (such as Universal Studios Dubai and a Marvel Superheroes Theme Park), you may prefer exploring Global Village — an expansive marketplace, open seasonally, with rides and games that rival any fair. This is where you'll find the locals having family nights and romantic rendezvous. Dress conservatively, and try to pace yourself with all of the tempting snacks (do not miss the PappaRoti stand, you'll thank us later).

'Blues Clues' creator debuts new show

Kids' shows. "Creative Galaxy" aims to artistically inspire the preschool set.

Amazon Studios just began airing "Creative Galaxy," a new show from Angela Santomero, the creator of "Blues Clues," which is a favorite among parents and children. In a time when art education is in peril, the show encourages kids to be creative. Here, Santomero gives us the inside scoop.

What's the premise of the new show?

It's an interactive creative adventure series that we made with the goal of getting kids to be creative problem solvers and show ways that they can use art as a resource for life. We created a world that's an entire galaxy, and each planet is a different art medium, such as painting, paper or sculpting. The main character is named Artie; he's a little kid alien and takes the audience on his adventures. There's always a problem that he has to use art to solve.

Coming up with a main character that really connects to kids is so important. What were some of the things you considered when creating Artie?

ANGELA SANTOMERO

Amazon's second original kids' series, "Creative Galaxy," premiered last week on Amazon Prime Instant Video. / PROVIDED

We weighed so many things. We did a lot of research and found that girls are more likely to jump into an art project than boys. So we decided to do a boy character who could be any kid in a lot of ways.

What about some of the other characters?

We try to show all sorts of kids that the audience will be able to relate to. There's one kid on the show who finds it hard to do art because he can't sit still. Then he learns about splatter painting, which shows that you don't have to be still to do art.

Are there other educational concepts that you try to include in the series?

Yes. The show has a lot of creative problem-solving and new ways of looking at the world. We research [before writing] every episode and every script, and we tweak and change the script based on what researchers recommend.

Horoscope

Cancer | June 21-July 22. Consider turning a skill into a sideline business. Using your energy will help you gain financial stability.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Overspending will get you in trouble. Trying to lift your spirits by shopping will have the opposite effect.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You can't make the correct decision without first getting your facts straight. Rather than relying on someone else, do your own research until you feel confident.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Young and old alike can provide you with insight. Spend some time with relatives or friends, and absorb all the knowledge you can.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. You should avoid large gatherings today. This is a great time to tackle some work that is weighing heavily on your mind.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You can enhance your lifestyle if you take note of how others live. You will catch the eye of someone who has something to offer you.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Re-evaluate your financial position, and you'll find a way to supplement your savings. Stay ahead of the rising cost of living.

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Tame your temper. It's essential to keep the lines of communication open if you want to avoid verbal clashes.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Once others are aware of what you have to offer, professional advancement will follow. It's in your best interest to promote your skills.

Aries | March 21-April 20. You will garner acclaim for your leadership skills. Become involved in your community by helping a cause.

Taurus | April 21-May 21. Don't be tempted to exaggerate. Others will lose confidence in you if you are misleading. Stick to what you know.

Gemini | May 22-June 20. You will act as the catalyst for any activity that you choose to participate in. Your enthusiasm and sense of humor will rally friends.

Good citizen doesn't mean good gun owner

Re: 'Guns make some safer' (Metro, June 26-29) The shooters from Columbine, Virginia Tech, Newtown, the post offices in the 1980s and 1990s, etc., were not goons and thugs, but apparently honest, responsible Americans. Owning a gun doesn't make you any safer, firstly because thugs will not announce their intentions, and secondly because you and the people around you get exposed to fatal accidents. Gun control is not about confiscating guns of honest citizens, it is about how they are bought, used and by whom.

LAURENT BRUN, VIA EMAIL

I get annoyed when a so-called responsible gun owner whines that gun control means taking guns away from law-abiding, responsible gun owners. If responsible gun owners were actually responsible, there would be no incidents of children getting access to a gun and accidentally killing another child.

Gun control laws could help screen out mentally unstable people from obtaining guns. Gun control laws could prevent the goons and thugs from legal gun shows or straw purchases.

World Cup preview: US versus Belgium

World Cup. The United States faces powerful Belgium in the second round with elimination on the line.

The standard for the U.S. national team will be to make the second round, now that the program has advanced to the knockout stages for a second straight World Cup. But Belgium will be a huge test on Tuesday (4 p.m., ESPN) and might keep this impressive run from going forward.

The Yanks played Belgium in a friendly last summer, losing 4-2. The Americans were a step slow, as they were outclassed by one of the better nations in Europe. Four days later, the United States rebounded for a 4-3 win over Germany. They hope to reverse those results Tuesday.

US starters

The United States went to five midfielders for its game against Germany and we think they'll keep Jozy Altidore on the bench to substitute late. Head coach Jurgen Klinsmann went with Brad Davis in the midfield against Germany, but subbed in Alejandro Bedoya in the 59th minute. We believe Bedoya reverts back to starter Tuesday.

- Goal: Tim Howard
- Defenders: DeMarcus Beasley, Matt Besler, Geoff Cameron, Fabian Johnson
- Midfield: Jermaine Jones, Kyle Beckerman, Michael Bradley, Alejandro Bedoya, Graham Zusi
- Forward: Clint Dempsey

Three reasons the US will struggle ...

1 Belgium is better
Eden Hazard, the star attacking midfielder for English giants Chelsea, and Romelu Lukaku, who scored 15 goals on loan for Everton last year, are incredibly dangerous up front. But Hazard has been a little erratic this tournament and Lukaku has been subbed out twice in group stage. Despite this, Belgium is a good team and bound to start clicking sooner rather than later. The Americans hope it will be after this tournament.

2 Backline woes
Geoff Cameron looked shaky in the center of the United States defense against Portugal, while Omar Gonzalez looked lost at times against Germany. The Americans have to be neat and tidy with Belgium's strong midfield and attack. They need to clear the ball, stay compact and not break down. It is easier said than done for a back four that has struggled the past year.

3 Not ready for 90
The good news is Jozy Altidore is back and jogging after a hamstring pull in the first game of the group stage. He has missed the last two games, but was cleared Monday to play in the match against Belgium. With that being said, he likely won't be ready to start and the United States desperately needs a jolt to the attack. Perhaps he gets fully fit in time for the quarterfinals.

ALTIIDORE HAS BEEN MADE AVAILABLE TO PLAY AGAINST THE BELGIANS, BUT IT REMAINS TO BE SEEN WHETHER HE WILL START.
GETTY IMAGES

Three reasons the US will succeed ...

1 They believe they will win

This American side is playing well and consistently right now. Since that loss to Belgium last May, the national team has gone 20-4-3, including impressive victories over European opposition such as Bosnia and Herzegovina last fall and recently Turkey, not to mention the result against Portugal last week. Belgium isn't playing as dominant as it did last summer, lacking some spark in the final third. Despite a rather lackluster showing against the Germans, the Americans are playing well and might be peaking at the right time.

2 Softer than a Belgian waffle
Belgium is battling injuries and form, particularly along the back line. Pivotal defenders Vincent Kompany and Arsenal captain Thomas Vermaelen are both listed as doubtful for Tuesday's match. In addition, midfielder Steven Defour is out for this match after receiving a red card in the final game of the group stage. This isn't an ideal starting 11 for Belgium and given the Americans' woeful attack so far this tournament, it might balance the pitch a bit more than last summer in Cleveland.

3 Current form
Belgium looked OK, but not great, with three opening-round wins in what was arguably the weakest group in the tournament. Meanwhile, the Americans were tested in the lead-up to the World Cup with an impressive 2-1 win over Turkey and another solid win over Nigeria. In three group matches, they faced two of the top four sides in the world in the "Group of Death" and advanced anyway. They have a shot to win here if they can play somewhere between their dazzling style against Portugal and their woeful, pack-it-in mentality against Germany.

VINCENT KOMpany WOULD BE A HUGE LOSS IF HE DOES NOT PLAY AGAINST THE AMERICANS.

Bucks get Kidd

The Bucks and Nets officially came to an agreement on compensation for Jason Kidd to become the new head coach in Milwaukee. The Nets will receive two second-round picks from the Bucks. The Bucks also officially fired current head coach Larry Drew on Monday. It is believed Kidd will have say over personnel.

Ophthalmology.

The world-class ophthalmologists of Columbia University Medical Center are now conveniently located on the Upper West Side.

It's one thing to practice ophthalmology. It's another to be the ophthalmologists other specialists look to. All ColumbiaDoctors are faculty members of Columbia University Medical Center and practice at NewYork-Presbyterian, giving them access to the latest in new therapies and diagnostic methods. We offer comprehensive eye care as well as advanced medical and surgical sub-specialties such as pediatric ophthalmology, glaucoma, retina, cataract and refractive surgery, and more.
